Candy gained almost 3 pounds in the past year; she weighs 11.4 pounds today. Her body temperature was normal at 101.7F; her general physical exam appears fine. She is quiet but does not appear lethargic; she is alert and responsive.

However, the timing of her recent heat 2 weeks ago is cause for concern of a possible uterine infection or even possible pyometra (although pyometra usually occur later than 2 weeks after heat). Let us know when you can pursue the blood test and possible radiographs to evaluate her abdomen (palpation today did not reveal an enlarged uterus).

We are sending home Nutrical and vitamin supplement for supportive care. Try home cooked food such as boiled rice and chicken (skinless and boneless). If still no improvement, she needs to get her work-up.

Rx: Nutrical --- Give 2 ml by mouth twice daily or as directed when appetite is low..tnt

Rx: Canine Soft Chews - Vitamin --- Give 1 treat per day or crushed and mix in food once daily..tnt

Please call with an update in 2-3 days; sooner if problems..tnt
