Sophia was growly and talkative as usual. She seemed mildly less upset as she was distracted by the view from the exam room window. She gained a little more than 1/2 pound in the past 6 months; she weighs 12.32 pounds today.

Besides the clear eye discharge, her ears and eyes look good; no sign of infection. Restart her lysine supplement 500 mg per day.

Teeth still appear fine; mild tartar on her upper premolars but no significant gingivitis. Much as she is calmer with age, I still do not feel brave enough to stress her out with a full oral exam --- to check the back of her mouth. No lesions, sores, or growths noted when she was hissing open-mouth at me :)

Her heart and lungs sound clear; no murmur and no congestion.

The abdomen palpated normal; non-painful. She was actually quite good for the abdominal palpation this visit.

No tapeworms noted. Restart the Frontline Plus for flea control.

We updated her FVRCP vaccine on her left hip. Let us know if any lethargy or soreness.

As we discussed, since she is at near-zero risk to rabies, we did not update her rabies vaccine. Let us know if her exposure changes, we will need to vaccinate her then.

Unless problems or concerns, we will see her in a year for her check-up. However, if you see her gaining more weight, we may need to do a courtesy weight check on her and consider transitioning her to a weight control diet (and supplement Winkie if needed)..tnt
